

Abstract

This invention relates to genetic loci and methods for using polymorphic markers indicative of the propensity for longevity and the resistance to age-related disease. In particular, the invention defines a specified region of human chromosome 4 associated 5 with exceptional longevity.